

Website Under New Management

As some of you know, we have been struggling to keep the website updated. As of this month, I have taken over as Web Master along with being the Newsletter Editor. Jamie Walters had done a great job, but has just become too busy to maintain it.

The site can still be found at www.liteflyers.org and has been transferred over. Updates and improvements are still underway. Keep watching for what's new!

January Aviation Trips

This past winter seemed as though it was her to stay. That is not to say that people were not getting their aviation fix. There were two trips that the group was able to participate in. The first was our trip to the MAPS Museum and the second was a trip to tour the Titan Factory.

The MAPS Museum trip on January 22 started out with the group gathering at Ryans for a tasty breakfast. We had a large group show up to eat and talk beforehand.

After everyone was full, we made our way over to the museum where we were given a group discount and a guided tour of the place. It was confined to the enclosed hanger due to the weather, but the guides greeted us warmly and had a lot of information to wrap us in. Many of the staff were veterans and it was wonderful to hear them speak on their history. Anyone who could not make it owes it to themselves to visit and talk with some of the remaining witnesses to some of the most interesting times in history.

The other trip was arranged by EAA Chapter 1252 and was a visit to the Titan Aircraft Factory in Austinburg, OH. We started out with breakfast at the Waffle House on 45 and then proceeded over to the factory.

We were greeted by the owner and told about the history of the company and also about it's involvement with helping establish the light sport rules.

After the Meet-And-Greet, we were given a tour of the facility. We saw several planes in varying states of completions well as the stock areas and manufacturing equipment.

Both trips were great and the time went by just too quickly. The winter months can take their toll on you if you don't do something to keep your spirits up. Everyone left with a smile on their face and a little more bounce in their step. Start thinking about next year's winter trip so we can keep things fresh and interesting. Bring your suggestions to the monthly meeting for discussion.
